Bio

Noushin Dunkelman, the founder of MaxSynergy Consulting, has over 25 years of experience in biotech companies in areas of product development, management, and team development. As a seasoned executive, she has built cohesive teams with various technical and educational background that have worked successfully and efficiently in startup to midsize companies. After years of working on the technical side, 5 years ago she decided to refocus her career in helping companies with their organizational challenges.

In her role at MaxSynergy Consulting, she helps companies meet their goals by providing custom practical solutions for technical management development and team integration. She does this by improving efficiency in communication at all levels of the organization and help implement new skills, tools, and practices needed for long-term success.
